EARTH'S VAIN DECISION. FOR THE HERALD-BY CORA-

I spake unto old Father Time. "Say, shall I build on gold? And make for me and mine a home, With grandour all untold?"

"Oh, no." Time kindly answered me.

"Its wings are ever spread, And ere those joys will gladden thee, Its grandeur will have fled. Do you not know," he asked of me,

The flowers thou wouldst claim as thine Will surely fade away."

Then I shall build on fame!" I cried, 'A temple to the skies! And all will goze upon my name With raptured, loving eyes?"

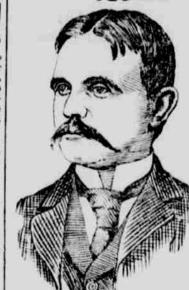

"That will not do," again he said, "For fame, like pride, must fail; Earth to the earth and dust to dust,"

"Then surely I may build on love-The trusting heart, it covers:" "Such love will bring thee tears.

Why will thou seek," he questioned me, "To build upon the sand, When thou couldst build beyond the ski A temple high and grand?

The Rock of Ages thou shouldst find, And at each setting sun, Write plainly, with a diamond pen,

Then learn the words of wisdom well, And make God's staff thy stay, And rest assured when thou art aged, He'll gently guide thy way Into the realms of light and joy, Of His eternal day."
